Mr. McEnery's reference to the Sugar Trust was that the fight that the Trust made in the Senate and the defeat to which, in the end, the Trust was obliged to go. He praised the sugar schedule prepared by the House, and declared that it eliminated all trusts influences, which had been so potent in the previous Congress and had been able to dictate the the sugar schedule of the Wilson bill. Of the amendments offered by the Democrats, to restore the ad valorem duties of the Wilson bill, Mr. McEnery pointed out that "it received the support of the opponents of the bill and the Sugar Trust, for no better schedule could have been asked by the Trust. It was the schedule which it die tated, and the one under which it so rapidly progressed to power and influence. -Wash. (D. C.) Star.

The Change the People Got in 1894. Boston Journal, Repl.

The people voted for change. They got it. Even before the Gorman-Wilson monstrosity went into effect prices began to go down. The cost of living was cheapened. Nobody has denied that-no body will deny it. But-and here is the vital fact which very soon made the people excedingly weary of their "change" -wages began to drop even before prices did. They fell faster and they fell farther. Of what advantage is the reduction in price of, say, foreign woolens from $2 to $1.75 per yard to the machanic whose daily pay has been sliced down from $2 to $1.50-or, may be, cut off altogether? What gain is it to the working woman if 124 cents is snipped off the cost of foreign silks, when at the same time her wages are reduced 25 per cent., or she is dismissed because of a "falling off in business?"

An Old Idea.

Every day strengthens the belief of eminent physicians that impure blood is the cause of most of our diseases. Twenty-five years ago this theory was used as a basis for the formula of Browns' Iron Bitters. The remarkable cures effected by this famous remedy are sufficient to prove the theory correct. Browns' Iron Bitters are sold by TAZEWELL DRUG Co., Sole Agents.

The center and hind boards are made the same as Fig. 2 except that no stake is needed. Fig. 3 shows one of the sides held to gether with bolts or wire nails. A 7-foot rack requires side pieces 3 feet 7 inches long. Fig. 4 represents the hay rack complete. It is necessary to have a good, strong bottom. It is also well to have wagon rods having thumb nuts pass through the box across the center and ends to hold it firmly. A long rack should have four cross pieces. Fig. 5 shows how the sides are lifted off or placed in position. A boy can readily do this. The box is shown 13 inches deep, but 11 or 12 will answer. Fig. 6 represents the end boards for the sheep rack. Standards A are 2x4-inch scantling 3 feet 7 inches long. D is the double backboard 12 inches wide which holds the hind shelving or hurdle in place. B B are nailed to standards A on the outside. Fig. 7 shows the sheep rack. The end boards are placed in position, and the right-hand shelving is put on the left side of the box and the left on the right. claims to have one—is not desirable or profitable. We once saw a pen of ten hogs where aggregate weight was 10,-000 pounds. Hogs to weigh must be kept until the second year, and that of itself is not advisable.

Secretary Wilson thinks that hog cholera can be "abolished" and will study the thing from A to Z. It has been studied already, but the more it is studied the worse it is. Feed less corn, breed from more mature stock and keep the hogs under healthful conditions are all the science there is to the subject .- Western Plowman.

Small Hogs Pay Best Immense size is no longer sought as in former times. Smaller animals are made ready for the shambles more cconomically, the meat is more palatable and maturity is gained in a shorter time. It has been the constant aim of intelligent breeders to produce an animal that will fatten at any age and great measure of success in that direction has been attained. Formerly the farmer believed it to be necessary for his pigs to be farrowed in August or early September for his pork supply in the autumn of the next year. Thus they would be several months more than a year old when slaughtered, while now, by the aid of improved breeds and a better system of feeding, a 200-pound hog can be produced in less than half time, better, more salable and of course at less outlay .- Rural World.
